K2 Base Camp is the starting point for expeditions to K2, the world's second-highest peak (8,611m), located in the Karakoram Range of Pakistan. Standing at approximately 5,150 meters (16,896 feet), the base camp is reached through one of the most challenging yet scenic treks in the world. The journey takes around 12 to 16 days for a round trip and is best undertaken between June and September. Along the way, trekkers are rewarded with breathtaking views of towering peaks, massive glaciers, and rugged landscapes, including the Baltoro Glacier, Concordia (known as the "Throne Room of the Gods"), and Broad Peak, with the majestic K2 dominating the horizon. The journey is demanding but rewarding, attracting adventure seekers and seasoned trekkers looking to experience the raw beauty of the Karakoram.
